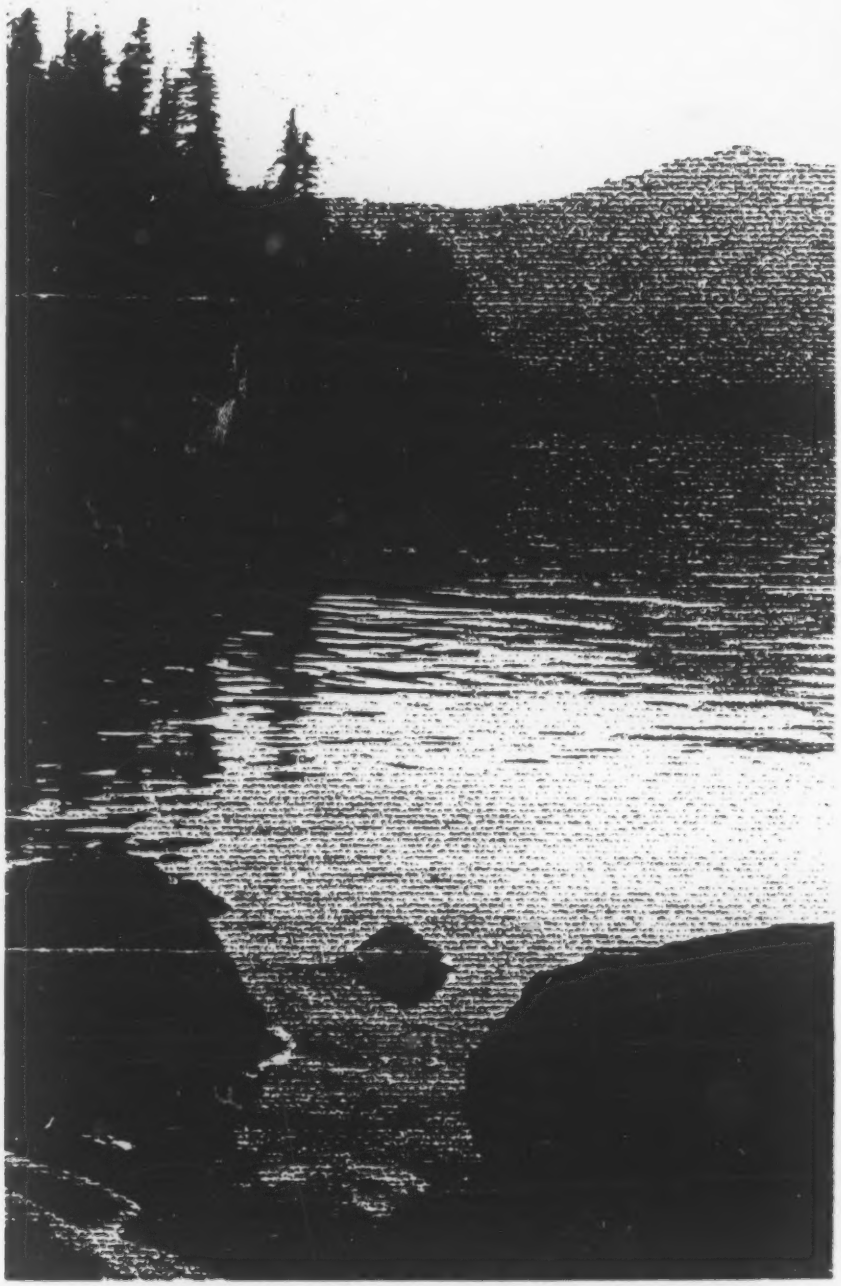
COLORADO JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT

ANNUAL REPORT

July 1, 1988 - June 30, 1989



The judges and employees of the Judicial Department are committed to improving access to justice and to providing the kind of judicial system to which the people of Colorado are entitled: efficient, expeditious, and economical in its operation; and fair, impartial, and just in its decisions. A successful effort toward these goals will be rewarded by the continuing confidence of the people of this state in its system of justice.

-Chief Justice Joseph R. Quinn

FINANCIAL RESOURCES

The Colorado Legislature appropriates funds to the Judicial Department for the fiscal year beginning July 1 and ending June 30 the following year. During FY 1989, the Legislature appropriated $82,459,587 to the department; this is approximately 2.1 percent of the state's overall budget.

The Judicial Department is a labor-intensive organization; 80 percent of its budget is allocated for salaries and related benefits.

The Judicial Department's revenue for the state's general fund increased from $16.7 million in FY 1988 to $17.5 million in FY 1989.

Revenues generated by the department support the state's budget.

The addition of a collections program coordinator in the department and a collections investigator in each judicial district increased collections and reduced accounts receivable. This program received a National Association for Court Management award in 1989.

TECHNOLOGY'S TOOLS

The State Court Administrator's Office/Data Processing Division began installing a network of IBM AS/400 minicomputers in each judicial district throughout the state. The installation of two major software packages on these computers automates court and probation case management, helping courts meet the dual challenge of mounting caseloads and the need for timely response to the public's demand for vital information.

One of the two software programs reaching Colorado's courts through this wave of technology is JAMS – Judicial Automated Management System. Purchased in April 1989 from Mayoras and Hittle, Inc., JAMS provides relational data-base technology to aid in query and reporting requests as well as full automation of court case management.

In January 1989, the Judicial Department purchased Court Alternatives System from Texas Logic, Inc. Using the same relational data-base technology as the court case management system, this system fully automates probation case management.

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Nearly 1,500 Judicial Department employees and judges received instruction and training during FY 1989. As required by statute, justices and judges attended the Annual Judicial Conference, a business and educational event.

Nine judges attended the National Judicial College in Reno, Nevada, for extensive judicial training; 21 newly appointed judges attended orientation programs; and juvenile judges and commissioners/referees held annual training conferences.

Management and supervisory skills training took place for chief probation officers, probation supervisors, and district administrators. Training continued for probation officers in the Case Management Classification System, a qualitative tool administered to determine appropriate intervention strategies for offenders.

A State Justice Institute grant provided training in adult educational theory and presentation techniques for a cadre of 36 individuals. The result: A "Judicial Faculty" designed and delivered new employee orientation programs for judges, probation officers, and trial court employees.

ACCESS TO JUSTICE

Alternative Dispute Resolution

The court-affiliated alternative dispute resolution (ADR) programs – mediation and arbitration – demonstrate the department's ability to adapt its judicial services to the needs of a changing community.

Mediation

Established in 1983, the mediation program is now recognized as an important adjunct to the Colorado judicial system. Functioning as a statewide mediation resource, the 13-county program provided assistance to parties in 644 cases, a 100 percent increase from FY 1988. Seventy-three percent of these cases reached full or partial agreements, and the average cost to each client was $80. Cases subject to mediation involve domestic, civil, and probate matters.

Arbitration

Designed to accelerate case settlements, trim court costs, and reduce judicial caseloads, a pilot mandatory arbitration program operates in eight judicial districts. The program, created by statute in 1987, applies to civil cases claiming money damages of $50,000 or less. With over 1,000 qualified arbitrators registered under this program, 435 cases were resolved during the 18-month period, January 1, 1988, to June 30, 1989. The program continues until July 1, 1990. The Judicial Department is preparing a report so that the Legislature can evaluate the program's effectiveness.

Computerized Information Centers

With a $20,000 State Justice Institute grant and state-of-the-art technology, the Judicial Department piloted the nation's first self-help, computerized information center. Located at Jefferson County's Hall of Justice, the center assisted persons representing themselves in small claims and child support matters.

The center improves access to courts and relieves court clerks of certain informational duties. The department will install the center in 10 judicial districts during FY 1990.

Jury Reform

FY 1989 saw the Colorado Legislature's major revision of the Uniform Jury Selection and Service Act. Two highlights, effective January 1, 1990, include a substantial increase in the fee paid to jurors and the implementation of a one-day, one-trial system for jurors in all 63 counties.

Child Support Enforcement Program

The Child Support Enforcement Program, a cooperative effort of the Department of Social Services and the Judicial Department, implements federal and state legislation to increase child support collections in Colorado. In 1986, Colorado instituted an effort to double the child support collected over the subsequent five years. To achieve this goal, the amount collected must increase 15 percent each year. Child support collections rose from $22.4 million in federal FY 1987 to $27.4 million in federal FY 1988, an 18 percent increase.

PUBLIC SAFETY

Sentencing

After a guilty verdict or guilty plea, the court imposes a sentence authorized by statute. To arrive at an appropriate sentence, the court holds a hearing to consider evidence of aggravating or mitigating circumstances. In determining the sentence, the court relies on pre-sentence investigations conducted by the probation department. The sentencing choices available to the judge vary from the least restrictive probation to long-term incarceration and the death penalty.

Adult and Juvenile Probation

As FY 1986 probation caseloads approached levels deemed to be unmanageable, the Supreme Court curtailed low-priority probation services so that appropriate levels of supervision could be provided to the higher-risk probationer to improve the effectiveness and safety of community supervision. As a result, caseloads were reduced by 15 percent in FY 1987. The Colorado Legislature's additional authorization of positions for probation officers in FY 1988 and FY 1989 brought the individual caseloads to a manageable level consistent with public safety.

Colorado's probation officers supervised 23,488 adults and juveniles during FY 1989.

Driving Under the Influence

Colorado statutes require persons convicted of drunk driving or of driving under the influence of drugs to undergo alcohol and drug evaluations and to receive education and treatment in addition to any other sanctions including fees and fines, jail time, probation, public service, and restitution.

In FY 1989, the state's probation departments conducted 24,490 evaluations, a slight increase over the 24,131 conducted the previous year. The number of evaluations declined about 7.5 percent since the high point in FY 1985. This follows the declining trend in drunk-driving cases filed in the county courts.

Intensive Supervision Probation Program

Prison overcrowding and fiscal constraints led to the development of cost-effective, community-based alternatives to prison. The Intensive Supervision Probation (ISP) Program is a sentencing alternative that addresses prison overcrowding and meets correctional objectives. This option costs less than incarceration and meets the objectives of punishment, maintenance of public safety, and rehabilitation opportunities.

The Colorado Legislature created the ISP program in 1986, following the Judicial Department's two-year pilot project. In FY 1989, all judicial districts were provided resources to establish programs under guidelines determined by the State Court Administrator.

The program maintains offenders in the community at no higher risk to the public than those offenders traditionally granted probation. With caseloads between 18-25, probation officers keep in daily contact with the offenders to monitor compliance with the restrictive probation terms.

The program uses electronic and drug testing to improve supervision and protect public safety.

During FY 1989, 274 offenders were sentenced to ISP with 54 percent successfully completing the restrictive requirements of the program. Only 11 percent of the offenders revoked from ISP committed new crimes while under supervision. None of these offenders committed crimes against people.

SPECIAL PROJECTS

Commissions on Judicial Performance

In response to legislative action, Chief Justice Joseph R. Quinn appointed 66 persons as members of commissions on judicial performance in the 22 judicial districts. The commissions will provide Colorado's first statewide judicial performance evaluations to the public 30 days before the 1990 retention election.

A ten-member State Commission on Judicial Performance, appointed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, the Governor, the Speaker of the House, and the President of the Senate, provides standards and methods by which the district commissions conduct the evaluations.

The district commissions, appointed in the same manner as the state commission, will give voters objective and comprehensive information about county and district judges seeking retention and will provide feedback to judges so that they can improve their professional skills as judicial officers. The state commission will evaluate the performance of appellate judges.

The 128 judges and justices seeking retention will be evaluated on the following criteria: integrity; knowledge and understanding of substantive, procedural, and evidentiary law; communication skills; preparation, attentiveness, and control over judicial proceedings; sentencing practices; docket management and prompt case disposition; administrative skills; punctuality; effectiveness in working with participants in the judicial process; and service to the legal profession and the public.

PAUSE

PAUSE (Positive Alternative-A Unique Sabbatical Experience), funded by the State Justice Institute, provided a three-month paid leave of absence to six employees. Two teams of three took sabbaticals to complete projects designed to improve the court system's services.

Boards, Commissions, Committees, and Task Forces

The Colorado Supreme Court exercises supervisory and administrative responsibilities in a variety of legal and judicial areas. Citizen volunteers (both lawyers and non-lawyers) serve on boards, commissions, committees, and task forces to assist the Court in administrative, oversight, and planning duties.

Colorado Standards For Case Management

Appointed in August 1986, the Colorado Supreme Court Committee on Delay Reduction is composed of judges, lawyers, and court administrators who developed and implemented case processing procedures for the improvement of services to litigants and to the public. The committee recommended statewide standards directed toward the desirable goals of eliminating unnecessary delay in the judicial process; making more effective use of judicial resources in the resolution of disputes; and making the judicial system more accessible. The Chief Justice encouraged all judges in the state court system to study and to implement those standards in a manner consistent with these goals.

Gender Bias Task Force

In July 1988, Chief Justice Joseph R. Quinn appointed a statewide Gender Bias Task Force to consider whether gender bias exists in the Colorado judicial system, and if it does, to determine the nature and extent of such bias and to propose measures for its reduction and ultimate elimination.

The 25-member task force received financial support from the Colorado Women's Bar Association, the Colorado Bar Association, and the Colorado Lawyers Trust Account Foundation. It solicited information from persons previously or presently involved in the state court system. Public hearings and listening sessions were held in eight cities. The task force will submit a report to the Chief Justice in January 1990.

Literacy and Probationers

Recognizing the strong correlation between functional illiteracy and unlawful behavior, the State Court Administrator's Office, in partnership with Denver's adult and juvenile probation departments, implemented an experimental, interactive computerized literacy program. The Principle of the Alphabet Literacy Program is available on a voluntary basis to Denver probationers at no cost.

The program's objectives include improving literacy skills; augmenting job skills and post-release employment; reducing the number of school dropouts; and increasing the probability of participants successfully completing probation.

JUDICIAL DISCIPLINE

The Commission on Judicial Discipline is an independent, constitutionally created body responsible for reviewing on-the-bench and off-the-bench ethical conduct of the state court system's 228 justices and judges and the 43 retired judges serving in the senior judge program.

Fourteen complaints resulted in corrective actions against judges. In 13 cases, the commission determined that there was judicial misconduct and issued private letters of admonition, reprimand, or censure. In one case, the Colorado Supreme Court ordered the retirement of a judge for a medical disability.

The Colorado Constitution provides that the commission consist of ten members: four citizens, two district court judges, two county court judges, and two attorneys.

APPELLATE COURTS

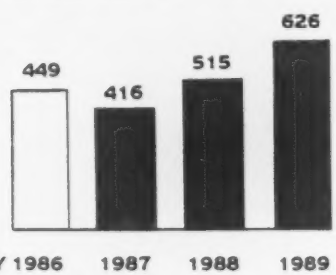
The Supreme Court

The Colorado Supreme Court, composed of seven justices serving ten-year terms, is the Colorado court system's final or highest court. The Court has discretionary or certiorari review of certain district court and Court of Appeals decisions. Requests to review decisions of the Colorado Court of Appeals constitute a majority of the Supreme Court's filings.

The Supreme Court has direct appellate jurisdiction over cases in which the constitutionality of a statute, a municipal charter provision, or an ordinance is in question; cases involving decisions of the Public Utilities Commission; writs of habeas corpus; cases involving adjudications of water rights; summary proceedings initiated under the Election Code; and prosecutorial appeals concerning search and seizure questions in pending criminal proceedings.

During FY 1989, the Court experienced a 14.7 percent increase in case filings. Of the 1,198 filings, 626 were certiorari petitions from the Court of Appeals, a sharp increase of 21.5 percent.

CERTIORARI PETITIONS FROM COURT OF APPEALS DECISIONS



Despite the large increase in case filings, the Supreme Court decreased the number of pending cases by disposing of more cases than in any previous year of the Court's existence. Resolution of cases increased 21.4 percent from 1,001 cases in FY 1988 to 1,215 cases in FY 1989.

The Supreme Court licenses and disciplines Colorado attorneys. The Supreme Court Grievance Committee, funded by attorney registration fees, polices the profession and makes recommendations to the Court concerning discipline of attorneys. Last year the Court disbarred 11 attorneys and suspended 21 attorneys' licenses to practice law.

During the fiscal year, 2,012 new cases were filed, a 3.4 percent increase over FY 1988.

The Court is working to reduce delay by granting fewer and shorter extensions of time for the filing of records on appeal and briefs. The addition of new judges and improved case management techniques is increasing the Court's ability to promptly resolve appeals. In the past year, the Court of Appeals significantly reduced its backlog of cases "at issue"; these are cases in which briefs were filed, but no decisions were issued.

During FY 1989, the Court of Appeals resolved 2,193 cases; 672 of these cases were settled or dismissed without written opinions, and 14 were transferred to the Supreme Court. The remaining 1,507 cases, including 331 criminal cases, were disposed of by written opinion.

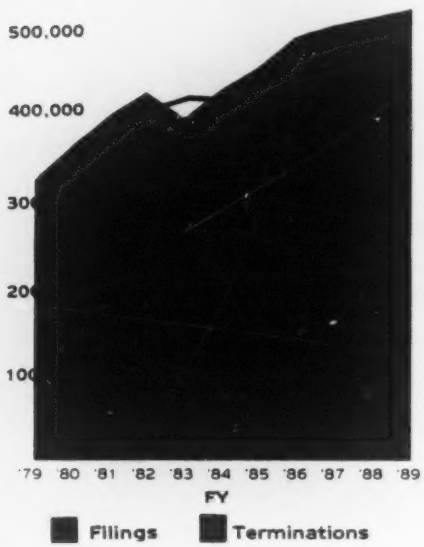
TRIAL COURTS

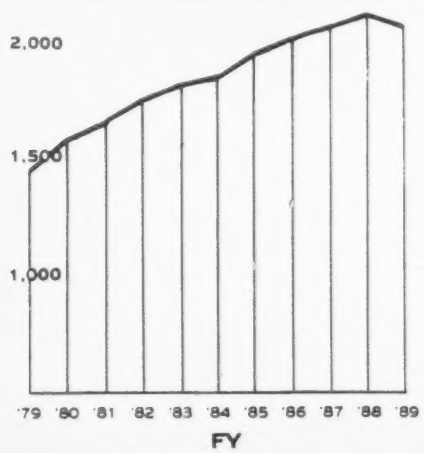
Colorado's trial courts consist of district and county courts with general and limited jurisdiction, respectively. Pursuant to statute, Colorado's 63 counties are divided into 22 judicial districts and seven special water divisions. Over the last ten years, filings in the trial courts increased 55 percent, and terminations increased 60 percent.

TREND IN TOTAL FILINGS AND TERMINATIONS IN COLORADO'S TRIAL COURTS



The number of cases terminated by the courts has grown steadily since 1979 despite the fact that court staffing and judgeships remained fairly constant. The following chart details rates of termination per judge in county and district courts over the past ten years.

TREND IN TOTAL TERMINATIONS PER JUDGE IN COLORADO'S TRIAL COURTS

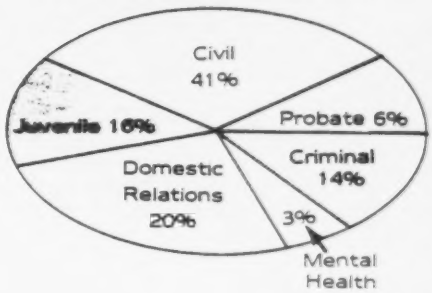


District Courts

The district courts handle domestic relations, civil, probate, juvenile, mental health, and criminal cases. Colorado's 110 district court judges handled over 142,000 cases during the year. Filings decreased by less than one percent during FY 1989, due in part to a 5.9 percent decrease in civil filings.

Civil filings make up 41 percent of the dockets in district courts. Thirty-nine percent of the civil filings are foreclosures, a reflection of the Colorado economy. Real and personal property filings increased 132 percent over the past five years.

DISTRIBUTION OF DISTRICT COURT FILINGS FOR FISCAL YEAR 1989

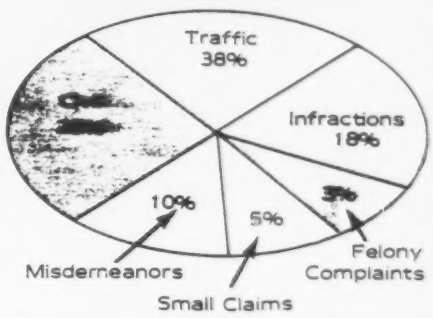


County Courts

The county courts hear civil matters in amounts up to $5,000, traffic cases, traffic infractions, misdemeanors, and small claims cases.

Continuing an upward trend, the county courts handled over 375,000 cases during FY 1989. These cases were heard by 112 full and part-time judges.

DISTRIBUTION OF COUNTY COURT FILINGS FOR FISCAL YEAR 1989



Small Claims Court

Small claims court, a division of county court, provides an inexpensive forum for citizens to resolve civil disputes involving claims of less than $2,000.

Attorneys may not appear and the court does not follow formal rules of procedure or allow jury trials.

Since establishment in 1976, Colorado's small claims courts have handled over 160,000 disputes. Small claims filings decreased over the last fiscal year; however, the caseload has grown steadily from 5,000 cases in FY 1977 to almost 18,000 cases in FY 1989.

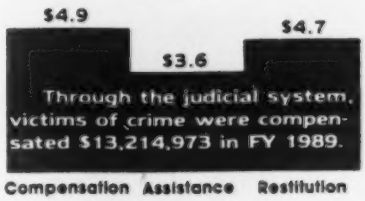
VICTIM RESTITUTION, COMPENSATION, AND ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

The Judicial Department plays a major role in providing direct and support services to victims of crime statewide.

Court-ordered restitution from defendants directly compensates victims for losses suffered. Victim compensation programs offer additional relief to victims of crime from fees assessed against all defendants. Funded by surcharges on fines paid by defendants, victim-assistance programs provide victim-witness coordinators, counseling, training, and referral services.

AMOUNT DISBURSED TO VICTIMS (MILLIONS) FY 1989



Through the judicial system, victims of crime were compensated $13,214,973 in FY 1989.

RESTITUTION PAID BY JUVENILE AND ADULT PROBATIONERS FY 1978-79 - FY 1988-89

During FY 1989, local community-based boards allocated $8,501,714 for victim-compensation and victim-assistance programs.
